PREFACE

ALL students of Greek ceramics have felt for many years the need of a work like the present, and it is a matter of surprise that during all this time no such work has been attempted. I could wish that its preparation might have found a more able workman than I, but the fact that the gaily painted Attic vases have absorbed me more than any other branch of archaeology ever since I first began the study, and that I have enjoyed far more leisure of late years than has fallen to the lot of my less fortunate confrères, may perhaps excuse the self-appointed undertaking.

I began the book for my own convenience but I question whether I should ever have done so had I realized at the outset the magnitude of my task. With a few brief interruptions I have devoted my entire time to it for nearly two years. The compilation of the unpublished material has been a matter of extreme difficulty owing to the European war. Requests were made to the directors of all the important European museums for photographs and data through various official channels which ensured their safe arrival, but in many cases these requests were fruitless. In consequence I am unable to include photographs of the following vases: Brygos 2*, Douris 14*, and Hermonax 2*; photographs of these could not be obtained from the museum in Florence. Nikosthenes 5* and Pamphaios 19* bis; photographs of these could not be obtained from the Villa Giulia, Rome. Euergides 4*, in Leipzig; Euergides 6*, Hischylos 2* and Pamphaios 14* in Munich; Hischylos 5* and Pamphaios 20* in Würzburg; Epiktetos 23*, Pamphaios 18* and 19* in Petrograd; Epiktetos 1*, Kallis 1*, Mys 1*, Myson 1* in Athens; Pistoxenos 1* in Brussels; requests for photographs of these as well as for data of other unsigned vases were either (as is most probably the case) entirely ignored or else the replies have failed to reach me.¹

Dr. Friedrich Hauser of Stuttgart, the owner of Euphronios 15* had died before my letter reached him. Pamphaios 15* is not in Palermo and I have been unable to trace it.

It must also be remembered that in many of the European museums, especially those in Italy, the conditions, owing to the war, changes in the directorate, renumbering the collections and the adoption of modern methods, are extremely chaotic, and it is often extremely difficult to locate a given vase. For these reasons a number of vases must perforce appear in these pages with very insufficient data. Furthermore, barring a few stray publications, very little material of a German or Austrian source has been accessible to us in America since 1915. Much as I regret these lacunae in the book they seem inevitable in view of present conditions and as there is little prospect of any amelioration in the near future I have decided, albeit reluctantly, to let the work appear in an incomplete form.

It has not been easy to decide on a plan which would satisfy every one. My chief ambition has been to produce a book which could be used by students with the minimum amount of labor, and hence it has seemed the simplest plan to adopt throughout the alphabetical order for the various painters and potters and to arrange the works of each, whether signed or attributed, alphabetically by museums in a numerical order. I am aware that this will not appeal to those who prefer their material classified by subject-matter or shapes. To avoid this difficulty a list of both subjects and shapes employed by each master has been introduced at the end of the section dealing with him, together with a third list of vases attributed to his hand by various scholars but which are cited under the name of another artist in this book.

For the benefit of those who propose to work along corresponding lines I may say that the card-catalogue system has been employed throughout; the only practical way to handle such a voluminous material. No less than five separate catalogues have been used in the preparation of this book: (1) The main catalogue, consisting of cards 5×8 inches specially printed with spaces for the necessary data; (2) the museum index; (3) the index of publications; (4) the inscriptional index; and (5) the general index. Each catalogue has acted as a check on the others and thus made it almost impossible for any vase to be listed twice. The only instances where such a thing is possible have been in the case of vases usually reckoned as disappeared and then discovered in some museum. Several such cases did occur in the course of the work but they have been detected and I do not think that any vase here cited has been catalogued twice.

The question of how far to go in listing attributions has been a very vexed one.¹ Mere mention in a catalogue of "style of Douris" or "style of Hieron" does not, to my mind, constitute a legitimate attribution, and therefore, except in a few instances, no attributions have been included unless some scholar has definitely assigned a given vase to a certain hand. I have endeavored to eliminate my own individuality in this matter by refraining from all attributions except those which are based on my own published work. But I have not been able to sink my identity entirely.

¹ All the various attributions made by Beazley in his different articles as well as those in his Vases in America have been here included as long as such attributions have been assigned to an artist to whom a definite name is attached. Occasionally, however, in his Vases in America a number of vases have been grouped together as belonging to the same hand without identification of the artist by a definite name. Such attributions have not been included here.

The same vase is very often assigned to several different artists by different scholars, and as it is obviously inconvenient to catalogue the same vase more than once in the Handbook I have adopted the principle, where a difference of opinion occurs, of listing such a vase among the works of the artist to whom, in my opinion, it belongs, but in every case the various attributions are mentioned. Frequently I have been obliged to include vases among the works of a painter, who, I feel sure, had nothing whatsoever to do with their manufacture, for the simple reason that only one scholar has attempted to identify them. Probably no one today can be found who believes that the amphorae in Berlin and Munich (Makron 44 and 75) were ever painted by Makron as asserted by Furtwängler; yet no other scholar has attempted to identify them and until some one else gives them their rightful status I have no course but to include them under the Makron attributions.

To be ideal, such a volume as the present ought to include a plate of every vase mentioned in it. This is of course impossible, for aside from the tremendous expense involved, the work would be far too cumbersome for students' use. Klein's monumental work on the "Meistersignaturen" is thoroughly out of date, and the recent attempt of Nicole in the Revue Archéologique for 1916 to bring it up to date has not been altogether successful. Reinach's Répertoire, certainly one of the most useful books the archaeologist possesses, is of little value for the study of stylistic details owing to the sketchy character of the illustrations; it is only fair, however, to state that the work was never intended for such a purpose. My intention, therefore, has been to publish a book which should prove a combination of both Klein and Reinach — complete in its list of artists and the material signed by them, with plates large enough to reproduce their work in a form sufficient to permit the analysis of stylistic details. It is not intended, however, to relieve the student of the task of using the larger publications when it is a question of discussing the peculiarities of any painter's work.

The question of references also presents some difficulty. That the bibliography attached to each vase is complete in the sense that every mention of it throughout the whole of the very voluminous literature no matter how slight, is included, is, I fear, distinctly not the case. Much of the literature of a hundred years ago is comparatively worthless and has generally been ignored. Also references have frequently been omitted which merely mention a given vase without drawing any conclusions from it. I have endeavored to include all references which seemed to me vital, in short to use my common-sense, and I hope that the number of those which have been omitted through oversight or inadvertence will not be found very great. One valuable lesson I have learned. Until I began my task I had never realized how general is the habit of quoting references without verification. Time after time I have detected the same error repeated in one work after another. Consequently every reference in this book (except in the case of some of the older publications which have been inaccessible to me) has been verified either in manuscript or proof. That I have succeeded in eliminating all errors is too much to hope for, but I think in the main they have been materially reduced. Needless to say I shall welcome any corrections or additions which may be sent to me.

Vases signed by a potter alone have been catalogued under his name entirely regardless of their authorship though such authorship has been indicated whenever possible. Vases signed by both potter and painter have been listed under the name of the painter. All signed vases are denoted by an asterisk after the number. Since the actual catalogue was finished some time ago and the numerical system adopted, I have been unable to avoid the use of bis, ter, etc., after some numbers as only in that way could new vases be inserted or old ones changed.¹ Some potters have been very difficult to treat owing to the general uncertainty about them. Meidias is a case in point, for not only is there the greatest divergence of opinion as to his date but no two scholars seem to agree as to what vases are really Meidian and what are not. I have not attempted to bring order out of this chaos and have simply included in the list of his works all vases which have been attributed to him by different scholars from time to time. For the correctness of such attributions I beg that I be not held responsible.

The title of the work is a sufficient excuse for the omission of certain artists or potters. No black-figure vases have been included except in the case of vessels of the dual technique; nor any non-Attic masters unless it was probable that their activity lay in Athens. The potters Charinos, Kleomenes, Kriton, Lysiades, Lysias, Lykinos, Platon, Teisias and Therinos have been omitted since their signatures are attached only to vases in plastic form or those which possess no figured decoration whatsoever. Only those vases on a white ground which bear a signature or which can safely be attributed to a definite named artist have been included.²

I should like at this point to enter a protest against the indiscriminate habit of attributing vases. Probably no one has struck a more important note in the study of Greek ceramics than Beazley and whether one accepts his attributions or not, one must recognize that their author has made a very exhaustive study of the subject and possesses a wonderful eye for stylistic details. But all students are not Beazleys and unless they possess similar characteristics they had best walk warily in his footsteps.

² For this reason I have not included Beazley's attributions of a number of white lekythoi to the Achilles Painter though I agree absolutely with him as to the correctness of these attributions.

This book could never have been produced without the intelligent and generous coöperation of a multitude of scholars to whom my very warmest thanks are due. Foremost among them is my very dear friend Mr. C. Densmore Curtis of the American Academy in Rome who at my request made a tour through all the museums of Italy and Sicily to obtain for me the desired data and photographs. Mr. Curtis met everywhere the most courteous and kindly assistance during his wanderings through the museums, and for the services rendered me through him I wish to express my most grateful thanks to the following: in Rome, Dr. Nogara at the Vatican, Professor Colini and Signorina Morpurgo at the Villa Giulia, and Signor Castellani; in Florence, Professor Pernier; in Naples, Professor Spinazzola and Signorina Levi; in Corneto, Professor Cultrera; in Orvieto, Signor Faina; in Syracuse, Professor Orsi; in Palermo, Professor Gabrici; in Girgenti, Baron Giudice.

For photographs, data, suggestions and assistance in many ways I wish to express my gratitude to the following: Dr. Arthur Fairbanks the Director and Dr. L. D. Caskey, Curator of Classical Antiquities of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts; Miss Gisela M. A. Richter, Assistant Curator of Classical Antiquities and Mr. William Clifford, Librarian of the Metropolitan Museum in New York; Dr. Stephen B. Luce, Jr., Curator of the Classical Antiquities in the Philadelphia Museum; Professor George H. Chase of Harvard University, and the staff of the Harvard Library; Professor J. R. Wheeler¹ of Columbia University; Professor Paul Baur of Yale University; Professor William N. Bates of the University of Pennsylvania; Professor David M. Robinson of Johns Hopkins University; Professor Henry Johnson of Bowdoin College; Miss Mary H. Swindler of Bryn Mawr College; Mr. Arthur Hamilton Smith, Keeper of Greek and Roman Antiquities in the British Museum, and Sir Cecil Smith, Director of the Victoria and Albert Museum; Mr. Edward Warren of Lewes and the directors of the museums of Birmingham, Canterbury, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Liverpool, and Norwich; M. Babelon, Director of the Cabinet des Médailles in Paris; M. Salomon Reinach, Director of the Museum of St. Germain-en-Laye; Dr. Robert Zahn, Director of the Antiquarium in Berlin; and Professor Georges Nicole of Geneva.

To M. Edmond Pottier, Conservateur of the Louvre are due more than mere thanks. The material required from the Louvre, photographic as well as notes, was extremely voluminous and the labor involved to collect it by no means small. M. Pottier, in spite of ill-health, and war conditions in the Louvre, has spared no pains to place in my hands photographs of more than twenty vases and data relating to more than two hundred and did so in the kindly and helpful spirit which all Americans who have ever worked in the Louvre have learned to love and admire; had he been the author himself he could not have taken more interest.

Mr. J. N. McClure, Harvard '18, acted as secretary for me during the completion of the book and gave me invaluable assistance; Mr. C. Chester Lane and Mrs. M. S. Heller of the Harvard University Press have been more than kind during the onerous period of its preparation. Also, it would have been absolutely impossible to have published the work at the present time had it not been for the generous assistance of Mr. J. D. Beazley, who in addition to allowing me the free use of the proofs of his great work on the Vases in America, has given me countless suggestions and to whom I feel that I owe an especial debt of gratitude.

Wheeler. In view of my own affection for him after a friendship of more than twenty years, I can only express the deep regret I feel in common with all his friends.

Lastly this book is a tribute to the memory of two devoted friends. DeCou was killed at Cyrene on March 11, 1911, and his name must be added to the glorious roll of those who have become martyrs in the cause of science. Norton died in Paris on August 2, 1918, worn out by his untiring efforts as head of the Norton-Harjes Ambulance Corps during the darkest days of the Great War. Both died as they had lived, true and gallant gentlemen. I count it as a privilege that for more years than I care to number we three had been the closest of friends, fellow-students and workers in school and field, with never a cloud to mar a friendship which will always be among my most precious memories.

INTRODUCTION

FOR close on to a century the study of Greek vases has been one of the most fascinating fields of the many which are included in the science of classical archaeology. And this with reason, for of all the records which the Hellenic world has left behind, vases are perhaps the most complete and satisfactory. Most of the greater works of art in marble or bronze have long since disappeared in the lime-kiln or melting-pot; inscriptions are usually woefully fragmentary and can seldom be read without extensive emendations and the mighty monuments of architecture with very few exceptions are little more than shapeless ruins or foundations. But the little vessels of painted clay are practically imperishable and emerge from the soil after a sleep of over two thousand years as fresh and bright as the day they left their maker's hands. No other objects of an age which knew not the photographic camera give us as complete a record of the actual daily life of the Greeks nor so varied a portrayal of their wonderful mythology and tradition which in spite of Homer and the poets would be lifeless without the complement of vase-paintings. Small wonder that countless scholars have found delight in the study of objects which best serve to breathe the breath of life into an age now dead to us!

Since the discovery early in the nineteenth century of the various Etruscan cemeteries, veritable gold-mines for Attic vases (one need waste no time in refuting the theory of their Etruscan origin now entirely obsolete) collectors like Sir William Hamilton (the husband, by the way, of the fair and frail Emma, Lady Hamilton), Prince Lucien Bonaparte, the Duc de Luynes, and scholars like Gerhard, Welcker, and Jahn, the pioneers in the field, found their delight in the study of these new and fascinating documents. The presence of the masters' signatures on many of the vases added a fillip to the pursuit and laid the foundation for the identification of unsigned vases now so prominent a division of the science of ceramics. Owing, however, to the lack of accurate reproductions, photographic or otherwise, as well as collections easily accessible, interest in the subject was necessarily confined to the favored few. In passing it may be remarked that of all the scientists who have occupied themselves during the last century in the study of Greek antiquities not one has possessed a better eye, nicer taste or more intelligent discrimination than the famous French savant, the Duc de Luynes, and the student of today finds his criticism still fresh and accurate largely because his method was based on correct principles.

The history of Greek pottery has been written too frequently elsewhere for this book to touch at all upon the subject. Only a brief résumé of the progress of the study may here be included.

Perhaps the first really scientific treatment of the subject was contained in the Introduction of Otto Jahn's catalogue of the Munich vase collection. More and more as the nineteenth century advanced did the various private collections find their way into museums and consequently the museum vase catalogues began to assume a new importance. Reproduction on a wider scale also was made possible by the appearance of such works as the Auserlesene Vasenbilder, and the Trinkschalen und Gefässe of the German archaeologist Gerhard and the Élite Céramographique of the French scholars Lenormant and De Witte, the last entitled to the distinction of containing almost the worst and most inaccurate plates ever published. The various archaeological journals were filled with articles on new and interesting vases and by the seventies the study of Greek ceramics may be said to have been in full swing. The era of modern scientific criticism in vases may be dated from the publication of Adolf Furtwängler's catalogue of the Berlin collection, one of the greatest works that extraordinary German scholar has left us. Before the end of the century fairly complete catalogues of the collections in the Louvre and the British Museum had been added, not to speak of a number of minor collections.

Meanwhile the identification of vases with and without signatures was occupying the scholars, and in 1886 when the second edition of Klein's Meistersignaturen made its appearance the number of signed vases was fairly extensive. As the identity of such artists as Euphronios, Douris, Hieron, and Brygos became sharply emphasized through the study of their signed work, the fashion prevailed of setting up the 'Big Four' so to speak, as a veritable Procrustean bedstead to which every red-figured vase was fitted willy-nilly. One has only to glance hastily over the articles written before the end of the century to see how common it was to speak of a vase as 'style of Brygos' or 'style of Hieron.' Even Paul Hartwig's monumental work on the Greek 'Meisterschalen' which appeared in 1893 is still tarred with that brush, and though original and daring in its treatment did not materially emancipate the study of Greek vases from the conventional view. The true distinction between the formulae used by potter and painter was not as yet thoroughly understood and for that reason Klein's Euphronios, valuable though it be, has not stood the test of time. Likewise the study of the names followed by the καλός formula occurring so frequently on vases was still bound by the old idea that such names represented favorites of the vase-painters in the erastic sense and some strange and fantastic theories as to their importance in the dating of vases prevailed. By the publication of Reinach's Répertoire in 1900 access to rare and out of print publications became possible to the general student.

With the new century began the most valuable publication of Greek vases yet attempted, that of Furtwängler and Reichhold, containing more accurate drawings of most of the best-known vases than had heretofore been produced. Furtwängler's untimely death a few years later did not serve to interrupt its publication, his part having been entrusted to the able hands of Friedrich Hauser. As yet we do not know who has been selected to replace Hauser, whose death leaves a great gap in the archaeological world.

In this publication an attempt was made for almost the first time to break away from the 'Big Four' fetish and to differentiate the work of the unnamed masters. It is to Furtwängler's credit that he was the first to reduce Klein's imaginary Euphronios to his true proportions and to distinguish between the vases which were rightfully his and those which belonged to different hands though the product of his atelier, and to identify two masters of the first rank, the Panaitios and Penthesilea Painters.

Where Furtwängler has led the way many have followed, but the credit for having done more than any one else to revolutionize the study of Greek ceramics belongs to an English student, J. D. Beazley of Oxford, who in eight years has created almost a new science. His theory developed to its logical conclusion is briefly that every Attic r.f. vase can be identified as belonging to a certain hand. This of course has not been done and probably never will be, since considering the inferiority of so many of the Greek vases to do it would be useless labor. But Beazley has been responsible for the identification of more than fifty nameless painters, many of them like the Achilles, Pan, and Berlin Amphora Painters, masters of the very first rank. While his method has not met with universal acceptance at the hands of the older archaeologists it is hard to see how that can be long delayed. The best proof perhaps of its accuracy is that in several cases practically the same results have been reached by him and by other scholars working independently, like the simultaneous discovery of the planet Neptune by Adams and Leverrier. I am unable to agree with him on some of his attributions but having tested his method with considerable care as I have had to do in the preparation of this work, I am obliged to declare my unqualified support of his theories.

Much has been gained during the last hundred years and many of the problems which vexed our grandfathers in the scholastic field have been solved. It is my earnest hope that the publication of this work, which for the first time makes every well known vase practically accessible to the student as has never been the case before, will by its convenience spread the study of those artificers of a bygone age among a greater body of scholars and that before another quarter-century is past the problems which now vex us may be as clear as the day.

HANDBOOK OF ATTIC RED-FIGURED VASES

The classification of subjects which follows the list of attributed vases is based on the following principles.

Mythological: All gods or their attendants and all legends in which they figure which are not classified elsewhere.

Heroic: All scenes representing heroes like Herakles, Theseus, etc.

Epic: All scenes taken from the Epic Cycle.

Bacchic: All scenes relating to Dionysos and his following.

Military: Arming scenes or combats not otherwise classified.

Komastic: Scenes of revelry.

Symposia: Banqueting scenes.

Athletic: Athletic sports of any kind.

Sacrifice: Scenes of ritual or sacrificial ceremonies.

Genre: All scenes from daily life not otherwise classified.

All vases bearing the potter's or painter's signature are indicated by an asterisk after the number. As far as possible in the bibliography of each vase all references which give an illustration have been placed first and in their chronological order.

THE ACHILLES PAINTER

Beazley, JHS. 1914, pp. 179-226: idem, VA. pp. 163-165.

The Achilles Painter is the name given by Beazley to the nameless artist who painted the amphora in the Vatican representing Achilles on one side and a woman, Briseis perhaps, on the other.

This artist was a master of distinct individuality and belongs to the early period of the Fine Style; Beazley considers him a pupil of Hermonax.

On p. 219 of Beazley's JHS. article he gives a list of forty-three white lekythoi which he attributes to this painter, but these, for obvious reasons, have not been included in the list below.

AISON

The signature of the artist Aison is preserved only on a single kylix in Madrid. A kylix in the British Museum (E 384) is obviously by the same hand, and of this a smaller replica is in the Harrow School museum, so that both these vases may safely be attributed to him.

From his style he seems to have been the immediate predecessor of Aristophanes and Meidias, the former, according to Hauser, being probably a pupil of his. There are some grounds for regarding him as identical with the painter of the Kodros kylix, but in view of certain differences in style it is perhaps safer to regard him as a separate artist.

THE ALKIMACHOS PAINTER

Beazley, VA. pp. 134-138.

Beazley has given the name the Alkimachos Painter to an artist of the late archaic period whose style is very much akin to that of the Pan Painter. He uses the name Alkimachos on several of his works.

THE ALTAMURA PAINTER

Beazley, VA. pp. 143-145.

At the beginning of the Free Style stands the painter whom Beazley has christened the Altamura Painter, from the London volute krater found at Altamura. He seems to have been an elder colleague of the Niobid Painter and one of the most notable artists of the time.

THE AMBROSIOS PAINTER

Beazley, VA. pp. 19-20.

An unknown painter of the Epiktetan cycle has been called the Ambrosios Painter, by Beazley, from the name used by him. His work is very inferior technically, but he seems to have possessed a certain sense of humor.

Six vases bear the signature of Andokides as potter. As one is entirely in the b.f. technique only five remain to be considered here.

Of these, two are r.f., two mixed technique, and the fifth has figures in applied white on a black ground so that it is a matter of choice whether it should be included in a work dealing only with r.f. vases. Four of the five are amphorae and have the signature incised on the foot in each case using the form ἐπόεσεν instead of ἐποίησεν. The fifth, a mixed technique eye kylix, has the signature painted and as several letters are missing it is difficult to be sure whether it was ἐπ[ολ]ει or ἐπ[ό]ει.

Who the painter of the Andokides vases was has not yet been definitely established. The Philadelphia amphora (Menon 1*) which, until cleaning revealed the signature, has usually been attributed to Andokides, is probably the work of the same artist who painted the Andokides Madrid amphora (2*), according to Beazley, since there is a distinct difference in style between 2* and the other four.

Whoever the painters were, the position of this atelier is important in the development of the r.f. style, for its origin is probably to be traced to it, though certainty on this point is impossible.

The name of the painter Apollodoros depends upon the restoration of the inscription on the Castle Ashby fragment; the Louvre fragment contains only the first part of the name and the addition of the verb is conjectural.

Hartwig has attributed six vases to this painter, who, judging from his style, was a contemporary of Brygos.

Concerning the date of the painter Aristophanes the greatest amount of uncertainty prevails. Furtwängler, basing his argument on the ground that the excavations at Delos show no fragments of the Meidian style, places him later than 425 B.C. Robinson dates him 440-430 B.C. which is too early. Hauser places him in the last decade of the fifth century and Nicole in the first quarter of the fourth.

The two kylixes which bear his signature also bear that of the potter Erginos. Hauser considers that he was the painter for the potter Meidias and assigns the Populonia hydriae to him (Meidias 17 and 18). Most of the other works attributed to him by Hauser have been assigned by Beazley to the painter of the New York Centauromachy fragments (v. 2-4 of that master).

THE BALD-HEAD PAINTER

Hartwig, pp. 421-423.

Certain vases on which the figure of an old bald-headed man occurs were classed together by Hartwig and assigned to an unknown painter. Owing to differences in style, Hartwig's attributions have not been generally accepted and are better included in the work of several different painters. Hartwig's master is to all intents and purposes the same as Beazley's Briseis Painter.

The artist belongs to the middle archaic period and is a contemporary of Brygos.

MASTER OF THE BERLIN AMPHORA

This is the name applied by Beazley (JHS. 1911, pp. 277 ff.) to the unknown painter of the Berlin amphora 2160, who was a contemporary of the Kleophrades painter. His style is excessively individual and on the basis of the characteristics found on this vase Beazley has been able to assign a number of other vases to his hand. It will be noted, however, that a number which are marked 'school piece'¹ are not, in Beazley's opinion, quite good enough to be from the master's hand, though they undoubtedly come from his factory.

¹ The following list was compiled on the basis of Beazley's article in the JHS. Since then (VA. pp. 35-40) he has assigned most of the vases he called 'school pieces' directly to the master's hand, and the following only are reckoned as 'school pieces': 14bis, 62, 64, 65, 65bis, 72bis, 74, 75bis, 75ter, 82bis, 83bis, 91, 94, 95bis, 95ter, 97. The numerical system of this book was unfortunately set up when this change was made by him and it was too late to adopt a fresh one.

THE PAINTER OF THE BERLIN NIKE HYDRIA (2381)

Beazley, VA. pp. 150-152.

The third of the group of artists who belong to the first period of the Free Style is called by Beazley the Berlin Nike Hydria Painter. He was probably a pupil of the Niobid Painter but his work is rather finer in character.

THE PAINTER OF THE BOLOGNA AEGISTHUS

Beazley, AJA. 1916, p. 147, note 1.

Beazley, in his Kleophrades article, mentioned a number of vases which were probably from the hand of the painter of the Berlin amphora. In a subsequent article he has detached these and assigned them to a contemporary painter of the ripe archaic style who painted the Bologna column krater with the death of Aegisthus.

THE PAINTER OF THE BOSTON PHIALE

Beazley, VA. pp. 167-170.

The painter of the charming phiale in Boston has been named by Beazley after the vase, and called a pupil though hardly an imitator of the Achilles master. He thus belongs to the latter part of the early Fine Style.

THE PAINTER OF THE BOWDOIN PYXIS¹

Beazley, VA. pp. 70-72.

Scattered through the various museums are numerous r.f. lekythoi on which the figure of Nike is represented in various poses. These have been grouped together by Beazley and attributed to a minor painter of the middle archaic period. The artist seems to have been a 'pot-boiler' of very mediocre ability. The 'white ground' attributions have not been included here.

Beazley, VA. pp. 89-93.

It would be more correct to speak of the 'Brygos painter' since Brygos himself always signs with the ἐποίησεν formula and is thus the proprietor of an atelier. Eight vases are in existence bearing his signature; a ninth has completely disappeared and is known to us only by a brief description of Gerhard's, and a tenth signature exists on a handle from the Acropolis, in Boston (1*).

Of these eight, four (2*, 4*, 8* and 9*) are obviously by the same hand. Beazley suggests that a fragmentary kylix from the Acropolis which has half of a B on the stump of the handle may possibly belong to the Boston handle. Of the other vases the Frankfurt (3*) and Oxford (5*) kylixes, which are certainly not by the same painter as the first four, have been attributed with good reason by Beazley and Miss Herford to the Kleophrades Painter. The artist of the two others (6* and 7*) has not as yet been identified.

The signature is generally painted on the handle (in 4* and 6* on the foot) and the usual form is BRVΛOΞ ΕΡΟΙΕΞΕΝ. The following variations occur:

BRVΛOΞ ΕΡΟΙΕΞΕΝ 1*, 8*: BRVΛOΞ ΕΡΕΞΕΝ 5*.

There is no case of the use of a καλός name.

The number of vases which have been attributed to Brygos is very large. Beazley, however, would seem to be right in differentiating them and assigning a number of them to two painters who if not actually employed in the Brygos atelier were certainly contemporaries and possibly imitators — the painters of the Berlin Foundry kylix and the Paris Gigantomachy vase.

THE PAINTER OF THE CERBERUS PLATE

Beazley, VA. pp. 13-14.

Beazley has given the name to the painter of the plate in Boston representing Herakles bringing up Cerberus from the lower world. The artist belongs to the end of the Epiktetan cycle.

Chachrylion is known to us only as a potter. Since the Munich Geryon kylix which he made is signed by Euphronios as painter (Euphronios 7*) and the other Chachrylion vases are emphatically not by the same hand he certainly employed at least two painters. As yet no comprehensive treatment of his painters' work has been made and it is quite possible that the various signed vases are the work of several different hands.

His signature is preserved on fourteen complete vases and seven fragmentary ones; all except one are kylixes. A kylix (18*) which bore his signature has now disappeared.

The Chachrylion painter stands midway between the Epiktetan and Euphronian cycles and it may well be that he was the teacher of Euphronios. He uses the kalós names Leagros and Memnon; the name Epidromos occurs only on attributed vases.

¹ Perrot is inclined to believe that the vase is an ancient forgery as the execution is so inferior to the rest of the signed vases. This is quite possible (cf. Hoppin, Euthymides and his Fellows, p. 57). At the same time, in spite of the faulty proportions, the fragment possesses a certain charming naïveté and after all the difference in execution is no more marked than that to be seen in the work of other painters.

Sauer, in Thiemes Lexikon s.v. Chelis.

Very little is known about the potter Chelis. We have five vases signed by him, one (4*) an eye kylix of the mixed technique and the others ordinary r.f. kylixes. His painter belongs to the early period of the Epiktetan cycle, and the use of the name Memnon connects him with Chachrylion. Beazley assigns 2* to the Hermaios painter and 5* to the painter of the vases signed by the potter Euergides.

THE PAINTER OF THE CHICAGO STAMNOS

Beazley, VA. pp. 154-157.

The work of the Villa Giulia Painter, according to Beazley, was continued by a pupil and imitator who stands to his master in very much the same relation as does the painter of the Berlin Nike hydria to the Niobid Painter. Frickenhaus had failed to distinguish between their styles and had attributed the stamnos in Chicago to the Villa Giulia master himself.

THE PAINTER OF THE COPENHAGEN AMPHORA

Beazley, VA. p. 63, note 1.

A nameless painter of the ripe archaic period, who stands to the painters of that time in very much the same relation as Douris in his later years to his contemporaries, is the artist called by Beazley the Painter of the Copenhagen Amphora.

With the exception of Hieron we have more signatures of Douris than of any other artist of the r.f. period. Twenty-three complete vases are preserved today bearing his signature as painter and on one (13*) he adds the ἐποίησεν formula as well, thereby proving the existence of his own factory. Further, we have six vases in a more or less fragmentary condition, and a seventh (2*) which though lacking a signature is a duplicate of its fellow in Berlin (3*) which bears the joint signatures of Kleophrades as potter and Douris as painter. Four vases have entirely disappeared (36*-39*). All are kylixes with the exception of 1* (doubtful shape), 13* (kantharos) and 18* (psykter).

In addition we have five lekythoi (7*, 32*-35*) which are obviously by the same hand and bear the name ΔΟΡΙΣ alone without the verb. Whether these were the work of Douris has been hotly disputed. Klein and Beazley reject them absolutely; Hartwig, Pottier, Perrot, and Romaios accept them. From their style as well as the forms of the letters employed, the latter view seems to have some good reason.

The usual form of the signature is $\Lambda\text{O}\text{R}\text{I}\leq \text{E}\Lambda\text{R}\text{A}\text{O}\leq \text{EN}$ but the following variations are to be found.

Attic rho in the name: 8*, 16*.

Ionic sigma in the name: 3*, 11*, 14*, 28*, 30*, 31*.

Attic rho in the verb: 3*, 8*, 16*.

Ionic sigma in the verb: 11*, 28*, 30*, 31*.

Closed delta in name: 3*, 8*, 9*, 11*, 14*, 15*, 18*.

The following $\kappa\alpha\lambda\acute{o}\varsigma$ names are used by him.

Chairestratos: 3*, 9*, 11*, 13*, 14*, 15*, 22*, 26*, 31*;

Aristagoras: 18*; Panaitios: 2*; Hippodamas: 4*, 12*,

25*; Hermogenes: 19*.

As we see from 13* he was the master of his own atelier. In his earlier years he painted for no less than three different potters, Kleophrades (3*), Kalliades (19*), and Python (25*, 30* and 31*).

Douris never rises to any great heights; in fact he may be called a pot-boiler; but judging from the number of his vases in existence he evidently managed to hit the popular taste of his time. As a rule his work is quite unmistakable, especially his female heads which are quite sui generis.

At the same time there exists a considerable difference of opinion among scholars as to the vases which should be attributed to him. Most of those which Hartwig assigned to his 'Twig Master' are probably Dourian; again a number of vases which figure among the attributions below have been indiscriminately attributed to Euphronios, Peithinos, and Hieron.

78. BRIT. MUS. E 807. Pyxis (fragment). From Attica.

Cat. iii, p. 381: Hartwig, p. 625, fig. 68.

The form of the vase to which the fragment belonged is uncertain, though it was most probably a pyxis.

Woman's head. Ε Δ.

79. MUNICH 2648 (369). Kylix.

Cat. p. 115: WV. A, 1: Hartwig, p. 623, no. 16: F.R. i, pp. 114-115, pl. 24: Leonhard, Hieron. p. 18, no. 26: Luckenbach, p. 577: Pottier, Louvre Cat. iii, p. 1024: Frucht, p. 41, note 24: Graef, Jhb. 1886, p. 202, no. 66: Lau, pl. 33, 1-7.

The handle of the vase with the signature of Hieron does not belong to it, being of a different colored clay. Pottier, however (loc. cit.), believes that it does belong to it. That the vase is in the style of Douris seems evident.

EPIKTETOS

Robert in Pauly-Wissowa, s.v. Epiktetos.

Klein, pp. 100-108. Beazley, VA. pp. 14-18.

Walters, i, p. 422. Nicole, Corpus, 59.¹

Hartwig, pp. 12-16: 85-94.

Sauer in Thiemes Lexikon, s.v. Epiktetos.

Perrot and Chipiez, x, pp. 358-378.

Twenty-three vases and three fragments with the signature of Epiktetos are preserved to us today: five other vases signed by him have completely disappeared. The existing vases and fragments are eight kylixes, six eye kylixes (four of these are of the mixed technique — 7*, 16*, 23*, and 26*, with a b.f. central picture and r.f. exterior—), eight plates, a pelike, a neck amphora, a kotyle, and a fragment from some larger vessel the form of which is uncertain.

The signatures are invariably those with the ἐγραφεν formula except on 1* where the ἐποίησεν formula also occurs. By a curious error which occurs so often that it was probably intentional he generally signs his name with ἐγρασφεν instead of the correct spelling (5*, 7*, 11*, 12*, 13*, 18*, 21*, 23*, 26*, 27*, 27* bis, and 30*). Evidently his services were in considerable demand as we find his signature as painter combined with no less than five potters — Pamphaios (4*, 19*), Hischylos (7*, 16*, 23*, 28*), Pistoxenos (14*), Python (10*), and Nikosthenes (15*, 26*).

Only a single case of a καλός name, that of Hipparchos (20*) occurs on any vase signed by him, but the name is to be found frequently on vases which may be safely attributed to his hand.

Whether he was the originator of the r.f. style is very doubtful, and although we have examples of mixed technique, the fact that no b.f. vase exists by him would seem to make this improbable. He was, however, the most prominent painter of his period and judging from the number of vases which are usually regarded as being in his style, he undoubtedly had numerous imitators.

Only one undisputed signature of Epilykos exists (1*). The Berlin fragments (4041¹; v. Skythes 1*) are probably signed by Skythes and Epilykos is used as a καλός name. Most probably they were partners.

Epilykos affects a miniature style, and exhibits considerable skill.

THE PAINTER OF THE EPINETRON FROM ERETRIA IN ATHENS (CC. 1588)

Furtwängler, F.R. i, pp. 290 ff.

The class of vases called 'onoi' or 'epinetra' is well known. To the painter of one of the best of these Furtwängler has given the name, and attributed a number of vases to the same hand.

The artist was a contemporary of the painters who worked for Meidias, Xenotimos, and Megakles and is a good representative of the miniaturist style of the late fifth century B.C.

THE PAINTER OF THE EUAION KYLIX IN THE LOUVRE (G 401)

Pottier, Cat. iii, p. 1098.

Beazley, VA. p. 157.

A nameless artist of the early Fine Style has been called by Pottier the Euaion Painter, from the name used by him. He is a prolific artist and may be readily recognized by his fondness for extremely tall, slender figures.

The list given below might easily be increased as his vases are extremely common.

THE EUCHARIDES PAINTER

Starting with the stamnos in Copenhagen, no. 124, on which the name of Eucharides occurs, Beazley in the Annual of the British School at Athens, vol. xviii, pp. 217-233 has assigned a number of other vases which probably come from the hand of the painter of the Copenhagen vase. In BSA. xix, pp. 245 ff. he gives further reasons for believing that the Eucharides Master was the pupil of the Nikoxenos Master. Cf. also Beazley, VA. pp. 45-47.

Radford, JHS. 1915, pp. 107-139.

Beazley, VA. pp. 30-31.

The signatures of Euphronios concerning which there can be no dispute are eleven in number; a twelfth (1*), a fragmentary kylix from the Acropolis has merely the inscription 105 ΕΛΡ but as the restoration in view of the style to Εὐφρόνιος ἔγραψεν offers no difficulty it may safely be regarded as a definite signature. Another Acropolis fragment (2*) has the verb only, but the style is so distinctly that of Euphronios it would be difficult to suggest another name. Nos. 3*, 15*, and 30 have the name only without the verb.

Of the twelve authentic signatures 1*, 7*, 10* and 14* bear the ἔγραψεν formula alone and are thus certainly works from the hand of the master himself; 7* in addition bears the signature of Chachrylion as potter.

The other eight all have the ἐποίησεν formula and of these 12* has in addition the signature of Onesimos (although only the last four letters of this name are preserved the restoration is now universally accepted) as painter; and as the style of this differs from the others it is clear that certainly three different artists (Euphronios, Onesimos, and a nameless painter) were at work in the same factory.

As several of the seven ἐποίησεν vases and a large number of unsigned vases were clearly by the same hand and had in addition the name Panaitios, Furtwängler christened this anonymous painter the Panaitios Master¹ and it is now generally agreed that five of these vases (5*, 6*, 8*, 9* and 11*) are the work of his hand. Vase 4* was attributed to the Penthesilea Painter by Furtwängler, but Beazley with perhaps better reason has assigned it to a different hand, to the artist who painted 2*. Miss Radford considers that two painters were at work on this vase, the interior being the work of an artist she has termed the Polychrome Painter and the exterior by another nameless artist. This view has not met with general acceptance. Hartwig attributed 13* to Onesimos, but Buschor, with whom Beazley agrees, prefers to consider this vase as the work of a painter he terms the Perugia Painter: Miss Radford attributed it to the Brygos Painter but that attribution would seem to be forbidden by the style.

Summed up briefly the following division of the work of Euphronios seems generally accepted:

Euphronios as artist: 1*, 3*, 7*, 10* and 14*.

Onesimos: 12*.

Onesimos or the Perugia Master: 13*.

Panaitios Painter: 5*, 6*, 8*, 9*, 11* and 15*.

Penthesilea Painter or another: 2*, 4*.

There is no variation in the ἔγραψεν signatures; of the others the following variations are to be found:

ΕΥΦΡΟΝΙΟΣ ΕΓΡΟΙΕΞΕΝ: 4*.

ΕΥΦΡΟΝΙΟΣ ΕΓΡΟΙΕΞΕΝ: 12*.

ΕΥΦΡΟΝΙΟΣ ΕΓΡΟΙΕΞΕΝ: 6*, 11*, 13*.

ΕΥΦΡΟΝΙΟΣ ΕΓΡΟΙΕΞΕΝ: 8*, 9*.

ΕΥΦΡΟΝΙΟΣ ΕΓΡΟΙΕΞΕΝ: 5*.

The following καλός names are used by Euphronios:

Glaukon: 2*?, 4*.

Panaitios: 5*, 6*.

Leagros: 7*, 14*.

Erothemis: 12*.

Lykos: 13*.

Lyios: 12*.

¹ Furtwängler even went so far (F.R. ii, p. 134) as to regard Onesimos as the Panaitios Painter and assigned 13* to him. This view, of course, is not accepted.

ONESIMOS

Hartwig, pp. 503-562.

Beazley, VA. pp. 88-89.

Of the signed vases of Euphronios, no. 12* bore the signature of [Ones]imos as painter. As Onesimos uses the name Lykos he is practically Hartwig's Lykos Painter. Both Hartwig and Furtwängler assigned 13* to his hand, but that vase seems better attributed to another painter whom Buschor has called the Perugia Master.

THE PANAITIOS PAINTER

Beazley, VA. pp. 82-88.

As stated above, nos. 5*, 6*, 8*, 9*, and 11* of the vases signed by Euphronios are now generally regarded as the work of a nameless assistant who has been called the Panaitios Painter. The most complete list of vases attributed to him is given by Beazley.

Euthymides ranks next after Euphronios as the great painter of the Euphronian cycle, but evidently counted himself as his superior, judging from the celebrated inscription ὡς οὐδέποτε Εὐφρόνιος on 2*. He is the only artist of the time with the exception of Kleophrades and Hieron who adds the patronymic to his signature.

Only four vases exist today with his signature, the fifth (5*) formerly in the Museo Bocchi at Adria having now disappeared. Three out of the five signatures use the aorist and the other two the imperfect case of the verb, thus placing the beginning of his activity in the Epiktetan cycle. There is good reason to believe that he was the partner of Phintias and the master of the Kleophrades Painter.

The following names are used by him: Megakles, 1*; Smikythos, 1*.

Euxitheos is best known to us as the potter who employed the painter Oltos. Two vases, however, bear his signature alone, but as the style is very similar to that of Oltos it may well be, as suggested by Perrot, that both were painted by him. Beazley, however, attributes only one of them (1*) to Oltos and the other to Euphronios.

As 3 is most probably by the same hand as 2 it has been included in the list below; 4 and 5 are attributed to Euxitheos by Nicole.

The name Leagros is used by him.

THE FLYING-ANGEL PAINTER

Beazley, VA. pp. 57-59.

The Boston hybrid amphora 98.882 on which a silen is represented with a small silen standing on his shoulders was painted by an artist of the ripe archaic period to whom Beazley has assigned the name. The expression is not a happy one, for the term, which is unknown to American ears, gives an entirely false idea of the subject.

Hartwig, pp. 381 ff.

Hauser, F.R. iii, pp. 81-86.

Buschor, p. 176.

Beazley, VA. pp. 93-94.

The kylix in Berlin (2294) on which the interior of a bronze foundry is represented, was for many years regarded as the work of either Douris or Brygos. Hartwig first classified the vase correctly by assigning it to a master whom he called the Diogenes Painter. Beazley agrees with the majority of Hartwig's attributions but prefers to call the artist by the name of the Foundry Painter and adds materially to the list of attributions.

The style of the painter is very similar to that of Brygos and many of Beazley's attributions have heretofore been regarded as the work of that master.

THE 'FRAU MEISTERIN'

Hauser, F.R. ii, pp. 308 ff.

Hauser's theory that one of the vase painters of the Free Style was a woman has not met with general acceptance, in fact it has been denied by most scholars. The painter of the vases given in Hauser's list is practically identical with Beazley's Niobid Painter and most of them will be given under that artist.

The Munich psykter holder, however, happens to be the only one in the list which has not been attributed elsewhere (except by Perrot who assigned it to the Berlin Amphora Painter, but the vase seems too late in style for that artist) and hence it has been listed below under Hauser's creation.

¹ There is a confusion about this vase for which I cannot account. Loeschcke (AZ. 1881, p. 40) mentions a black figured pelike with identically the same subject and inscription seen by him in the collection of Sig. Doria in Capua and Cecil Smith remarks that he has endeavored vainly to trace its whereabouts. M. Pottier informs me that no. 10 is from the Doria Collection in Capua. The only possible conclusion is that this vase is that seen by Loeschcke but erroneously described by him as black figured.
